

Eisenhower — Half of Him Is Good, and Half Is a Riddle

Today's Quotation. The unstable multitude is cleft to opposite courses.

—Virgil

Half of what Ike Eisenhower said in his opening campaign speech at his old home town of Abilene, Kan., Thursday constituted his greatest political strength — and the other half his greatest weakness.

The former five-star general stuck out boldly against the tide of federalization which is dividing the people and bankrupting the federal treasury. He said the states themselves should solve the problems behind FEPC and the recurring public school crisis. And on these scores Eisenhower hews strictly to the line laid down by the republic's founders.

What the Kansan said will be liked, of course, by the multiple physicists who are falling over themselves in Washington — but this is matter of no importance. There are zealous in every age and every land who cried aloud in their national capital not for love of country but for a singleness of purpose that eventually crippled the whole nation and dragged it into dissolution and destruction.

These bitter and endless feuds lead only to tyranny — the kind of tyranny which caused our forefathers to flee Europe. And in America they set up a special kind of government, original strictly with them, which has been praised by the men of all lands as the first in the history of the world designed to preserve liberty and justice in the home community and guard against tyranny coming from the national capital.

It is not a perfect government, in that it hasn't an answer for all human problems — but this fact in itself makes it the most honest of all governments to date. . . . for not all human questions are wholly answerable. Our American government, therefore, is more honest than some of the federalist termsites who, without either wisdom or experience, are forever tinkering with it.

This commentator presumes to be a liberal, but it is a fair question to ask if after 20 years of ceaseless "crisis" our country hasn't been maneuvered into a most dangerous position internally with radicals dividing the people senselessly, and squandering the tax funds to a point where we might be helpless should the economy collapse and leave millions dependent on public aid?

On this score Eisenhower speaks well. His weakness is on the foreign front. "Real peace and security in the world" is, as he says, the universal prayer. But this grows day by day a more complex riddle. And it is one in which he has been personally involved.

No man can say what the political future holds for Ike Eisenhower — while the dispatches roll in from abroad. They may hold fair, or they may record still stormier weather, between now and Election Day.

Wholesale Price of Potatoes in Sharp Increase

Washington, June 6 (AP)—The government reported today wholesale prices of white potatoes shot up as much as $2 to $4 per hundred pounds overnight after the removal of price ceilings.

The Office of Price Stabilization OPS lifted the controls late yesterday after the Senate had voted to exempt fresh fruits and vegetables from price controls beginning July 1.

Today, OPS officials quoted figures from the Agriculture Department's Marketing News Service showing the overnight advance in prices at Pittsburgh and New York for potatoes from California and the Carolinas. The prices are wholesale for U. S. No. 1, size A, 2-inch potatoes.

Washington, June 6 (AP)—Predictions that the potatoes soon will be back in grocery bins and at trimmed prices, followed the government's action yesterday in cancelling price controls on potatoes.

But price officials and produce men alike said that before the potato price goes down, it will probably go up.

A produce buyer for a large eastern store chain said:

"A lot of speculators are going to get caught with high-priced spuds, and when the dumping begins, these abnormal prices will soon become history. Three more weeks should see plenty of potatoes in most stores."

He told a news conference it would be "interesting to watch" what happens to potato prices, but refused to make any predictions.

Other officials said potatoes have been almost impossible to buy in retail stores in many areas. They guessed there would be a sharp price increase, probably dropping off late this month and July, when the 1952 crop hits the market.

Arnall said the Office of Price Stabilization (OPS) decided to remove the ceiling over potato prices because the Senate had voted to do so, effective July 1. Although the Senate vote would not become law unless concurred in by the House and approved by the President, Arnall said it would be impossible to administer potato ceilings while Congress thrashed it out.

THE Senate vote was on an amendment to a bill extending the economic controls law beyond the June 30 expiration date. The amendment would discontinue price controls over fresh fruits and vegetables. Only white type potatoes would be affected.

Prisoners Still Top Truce Issue

Panmunjom, Korea June 6 (UP)—Allied truce negotiators told the Communists today that return of war prisoners on Red terms would mean "betrayal, force and bloodshed."

"Neither now nor in the future do we intend to be a party to such a transaction," said Maj. Gen. William K. Harrison, senior Allied delegate.

He said that only the Communists' stubborn opposition to "deceit and truth" blocks a Korean armistice. He repeated the United Nations Command's "final rejection" of the Communist demand for return of all listed war prisoners of war regardless of individual wishes.

North Korean Lt. Gen. Nam Il opened the meeting with a 32-minute statement in which he borrowed Harrison's question technique of Thursday but gave no answers. Harrison had asked if the Communists wanted the prisoners herded back "like cattle."

"Who has cut off the rations of war prisoners?" asked Nam. "Who has been incessantly slaughtering war prisoners like cattle with bayonets, machine guns, flame throwers and tanks?"

"Who is attempting to deprive war prisoners of their right to return home to lead peaceful lives and retain them in South Korea and Taiwan (Formosa), jeopardizing their lives?"

Herman Maxwell, 23, Thrice Convicted of Rape Here, Is Electrocuted Early Friday

Tucker Prison Farm, Ark., June 6 (AP)—A thrice-convicted Negro rapist was electrocuted here this morning after an eleventh hour attempt to gain a fourth stay of execution failed late yesterday.

Herman Maxwell, 23, was pronounced dead at 6:45 a.m.

His final statement to prison officials and 26 other witnesses was a plea for prayer.

"I just ask you all to pray," Maxwell said to a question from Prison Superintendent Lee Henslow. First convicted in 1940 for the rape of an expectant white mother near Hope, Ark., Maxwell had won three stays of execution on appeals to the state Supreme Court. Maxwell's attorney, Harold Flowers of Pine Bluff, Ark., filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus late yesterday in another attempt to stay execution, but both federal judges before whom the petition could be heard were out of town.

His last meal, shared with Wilson Wright, a condemned Negro slayer, consisted of pork sausage, ham and scrambled eggs, chicken gravy, french fried potatoes, wieners, biscuits and butter, apple jelly, pie, coconut cake and buttermilk.

Maxwell agreed yesterday to give his eyes for a blind person. They were removed shortly after the execution and taken to Little Rock.

The action reversed an earlier statement by Maxwell that he wanted to keep his eyes because, "I want to see where I'm going."

Red Defiance at Koje Still in Evidence

Koje Island, Korea, June 6 (UP)—British troops dug for possible escape tunnels outside prisoner of war compound 68 today while the North Korean officers inside brazenly displayed metal tipped spears.

In other compounds, including No. 85 which is so solidly Communist it has not been screened, prisoners set up maximum "monitor" details to prevent escapes and to watch for any move by Allied guards.

Prisoners in Compound 68, where some 200 war crimes suspects are held, held "bayonet drill" with wooden poles. They imitated U. S. 2nd Division infantrymen drilling in riot tactics with gas masks and bayonets.

But gestures of defiance were fading before the "get tough" campaign of Brig. Gen. Haydon L. Boatner, camp commander. An officer called it the "quietest" day on Koje since the former commander, Col. Francis T. Dodd, was kidnapped a month ago and held hostage for 78 hours.

American bayonet practice apparently was in preparation for the "big shift" when the 80,000 prisoners are moved to smaller compounds. An 8th Army spokesman said Boatner's headquarters was studying "methods and tactics" to permit guards to enter and inspect the new enclosures.

The "monitors" stood at 30 to 40 year intervals inside the barbed wire of compounds 76 and 85. Some observers believed the die hard Reds might be having difficulty holding full control over prisoners who in the past apparently have demonstrated and created violent incidents on order.

Seventeen anti-Communists were rescued from compound 85 Wednesday. One of them said he had been sentenced to be clubbed to death as an anti-Communist. He said there were probably 200 more anti-Communists among the compounds 2,000 inmates.

In Compound 66 which holds about 3,000 North Korean officers, about 50 strolled near the Allied guards and showed spearsheads they had made from scrap metal.

A sergeant of the king's Shropshire light infantry paid little attention.

"They know they can't do anything with them," he said.

Maj. Dawney Banroft led the company Shropshires in searching for tunnels with mine detectors and a motorized post-hole digger.

Steel Talks in Recess, Hope for Settlement

Washington, June 6 (AP)—Government sponsored peace talks in the steel strike recessed today until noon to permit industry leaders to study bargaining proposals.

The hours delay was announced by Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman, who last night reported "real negotiations going on."

The delay was requested by Board Chairman Ben Moreell of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Company, head of the management negotiating team.

Steelman said Philip Murray, head of the 650,000 striking CIO United Steelworkers, readily agreed.

There was some hope of an early settlement of the dispute.

Democratic Leader McFarland of Arizona told the Senate last night there might be a settlement over the week-end. The Senate then put aside until Monday all legislation dealing with the strike.

Steelman wasn't so specific but said he had talked with McFarland. "I certainly am not pessimistic," Steelman told newsmen, "but I wouldn't want to overstate my optimism."

Steelman said both sides had been discussing intensively all the complex issues involved. The walk out started Monday after the Supreme Court voided Truman's seizure of the steel industry. More than 100,000 mine, rail and other workers also have been idled by the steel shutdown.

The first break in the nationwide strike came late yesterday with announcement that the Detroit Steel Corp. had reached a contract agreement with the steelworkers, covering 4,500 employees. Details of the agreement, negotiated in Pittsburgh, were not announced. A district union official said the embodied Wage Stabilization Board recommendations.

U. S. Planes Shoot Down 7 Chinese Migs

Seoul, Korea, June 6 (UP)—American Sabrejets shot down seven Communist MIG-15s today and damaged two more in two blazing dogfights over Northwest Korea.

Sixty-four F86s tangled with 28 MIGs that were trying to intercept United Nations fighter-bombers on a raiding and supply attack.

It was the biggest one-day bag since April 21 and one more than were destroyed all last week. The 5th Air Force's MIG total for the war was boosted to 361 destroyed, 58 probably destroyed and 507 damaged.

Six MIGs were destroyed and two damaged when 38 Sabres slashed into a formation of 16 MIGs trying to sneak by the screening Sabres and attack fighter-bombers.

Russia Yields to U.S. Demand, Lifts Blockade on Small Berlin District

Scare Campaign Appears to Have Backfired

Berlin, June 6 (UP)—Russia yielded to an American demand today and lifted its blockade of an outlying U. S. administered district of Berlin.

Less than 24 hours after a strong American protest, Red troops removed felled trees blocking access to isolated Spandau and issued permits to 10,000 inhabitants to travel back and forth to the rest of Western Berlin.

But, the East German Communist government at the same time slapped the U. S. with a $14,000,000 bill for telephone service between Western Berlin and Western Germany during the past seven years.

Allied authorities speculated that the demand might mean that the Russians were intending to cut the telephone cable running across the Soviet zone between Western Berlin and Frankfurt in the U. S. zone of Germany.

The prospect did not cause undue concern, however. The Americans said they have short-wave radio circuits ready for emergency use.

The Reds filed a similar bill during the 1948-49 Soviet blockade of West Berlin, but did not cut the cable then when the Americans refused to pay. The East Germans claimed the money was needed to keep the cable in good condition.

Berlin, June 6 (AP)—The East German Communists filed today their scare campaign against West Berlin had backfired and frightened thousands of East German men into flight to the West.

West Berlin's crowded airport stations look in more than 1,500 East Germans during the last three days. In West Germany the flight across the zone frontier increased.

In the past 24 hours, the Coburg frontier station reported, between 300 and 400 East Germans arrived there from areas where the Communists are creating "safety belts" to isolate their zone from the West.

Many of the refugees were youths who feared being drafted into the new East German army. The Reds have announced they are forming "voluntary battalions" of young men.

The Hungarians and their satellite German "People's Police" erected new barricades and strengthened border patrols to stop the flow of refugees.

The entire Russian-controlled zone up to the job of trying to quiet the population. The East Germans were told it was "West Berlin" which was peaceful and that the Communists "security measures" were necessary to protect against "sabotage" by the West.

Against the Russian line, American and British troops in the zone of Germany have been ordered to remain in their positions.

Patmos Airman Ends Race

Views Place Ike in Camp of Conservatives

By JACK BELL

Abilene, Kan., June 6 (AP)—Dwight D. Eisenhower's plunge into the well-defined impression today he is in the conservative camp of Republicans.

There isn't any concise definition of conservatism but the five-star general talked at a hometown news conference here yesterday like a man the average Southern Democrat could go along with on many issues.

This was particularly true of the handling the candidate for the Republican presidential nomination gave the explosive civil rights issues.

He said, in effect, that no one can legislate civil rights, adding that the states should decide whether to establish their own Fair Employment Practices Commission. Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia, Democratic presidential opponent of President Truman's civil rights program, takes the same viewpoint.

Eisenhower's declaration put him at odds on this issue with enthusiastic supporters like Sen. Irving Ives of New York and Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon.

Assuming the Republicans link either Eisenhower or Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio as their nominee, the party will go into the November campaign without a champion of the compulsory type of FEPC many racial minorities are demanding as a test case on civil rights.

Taft has proposed a voluntary FEPC, with no powers to enforce its pronouncements against racial, religious and other discrimination in industrial hirings and firings.

This situation might invite the Democrats to tap Russell or some other Southerner as second man on their ticket in an effort to patch the North-South breach in the party.

On the other hand, it might spur the nomination of a ticket fully committed to FEPC for the same kind of campaign Truman conducted successfully in 1948 despite his loss of part of the South.

Beyond the FEPC issue, Eisenhower talked strongly of states' rights and state action. He said he was against "socialized medicine." He favored leaving school problems largely in the hands of the states, a view that put him in opposition to Taft's support of federal aid to education.

No Evidence of Sabotage in Train Wreck

El Dorado, June 6 (AP)—Missouri Pacific railway officials say "there was no evidence of sabotage involved" in the derailment of 13 cars to a freight train at Lion Oil Company's chemical plant here yesterday.

Repair work was held up on the track, however, by Sheriff O. R. Bishop. The sheriff, who said striking CIO oil workers were not implicated in the derailment, also stated that repair work would continue "until the cause of the wreck is determined definitely."

J. W. Trendwell of Little Rock, Mo-Pac division superintendent, said last night that a "sun kink" caused the derailment.

The "kink" is caused, he said, by expansion and bulging of a rail under extreme sun heat.

The 600 striking CIO oil workers were forced to withdraw their picket lines from the spur track on an injunction issued by Federal Judge John E. Miller at Ft. Smith. Chancellor W. A. Speer issued an injunction Wednesday barring all CIO picket lines from the plant yesterday were established by the AFL machinists who walked out after the oil workers in a wage dispute. The CIO International Oil Workers Union struck April 30 in connection with a nationwide walk-out in support of a wage demand.

Nation Gets Views of Eisenhower

Washington, June 6 (AP)—The nation today had Dwight Eisenhower's answer, expressed in a formal speech and two news conferences this week to the political posters. "What does Ike like?"

The thousands of words that came out of those three sessions contrasted with the silence that surrounded Eisenhower's own view while he was on active duty as General of the Army, foreign and domestic touches on his life.

Eisenhower the Politician Did Not Seem Like the Same Man as 'Ike' the General

By HAL BOYLE

New York, June 6 (AP)—He didn't seem like the same man.

Millions of Americans must have felt that way as they watched the startling contrast in Dwight D. Eisenhower's first two major television appearances as a political figure.

There was high drama between the two events and those who viewed them both will long remember them. One saw a retiring general at his best. The other saw Ike at his best.

Everything conspired against Eisenhower in the delivery of his opening address, read from a prepared text in the rain to a drenched hometown Kansas throng. It was a visual dud, a picnic that failed to come off, a letdown after long months of planning.

Eisenhower fought hard, but this man who had led millions was now a one-man army on a sodden platform. The bad lighting made him look years older — and tired. The wind whipped thinning hairs across his balding top.

He spoke vigorously, squinting at his text through heavy glasses. But there were no verbal bombs in his speech. The applause was scattered, sometimes ill-timed.

Eisenhower glanced about uncertainly. He hunched deeper into his raincoat. . . . Read grimly faster. The flags at his back hung limply. A local character wandered back and forth behind him, pausing now and then to say "bray" and clap his hands.

What was wrong? Eisenhower's stubborn face had lost its famous grin. It wore instead the weary dignity of an infantryman on a long march. But there was no dignity in the situation around him. Rain had wrecked his opening battle.

Violent Deaths in State Rise to Seven

By The Associated Press

Arkansas' violent death toll for the week beginning Monday rose to seven with the death of two children and a mill worker yesterday Thursday.

Eight-year-old Carl Edward Mangold, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Mangold of Pine Tree, Ark., was injured fatally in a farm accident. The boy, riding in a wagon, was flung to the ground and dragged several hundred feet when the team bolted.

At Madison, Ark., a 20-month-old baby girl was crushed to death beneath a gate archway when she stumbled against it, causing it to fall. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cross of Hughes, Ark.

Wharton Langley, a 32-year-old paper mill worker, died of electrical shock received at the International Paper Company Mill at Cullendale, Ark. He is survived by his wife, two sons, his father, three brothers and a sister.

Cherry Pledges No Increase in State Taxes

Little Rock, June 6 (AP) — Governor Frank Cherry today pledged that he will not ask for an increase in state taxes, either by raising present taxes or instituting new levies.

The governor formally pledged his first campaign for a state office before 4,000 cheering persons at a luncheon at the hotel here last night.

Cherry's departure from his post as chief justice of the state court, he said, was a relief. "I will not ask for an increase in state taxes," he said. "I will not ask for an increase in state taxes."

Cherry said he will do this not by increasing the present heavy burden of taxation, but by seeking new sources of income, but by eliminating all waste, inefficiency and corruption in our state government.

Taft Appeals to FCC for Hookup

Washington, June 6 (AP) — Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio has appealed to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) for a nationwide radio-TV hookup such as the three major networks gave Dwight D. Eisenhower's Abilene address.

Taft and Eisenhower are the top contenders for the Republican presidential nomination.

Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.), seeking the Democratic nomination, similarly protested the refusal of CBS to give him the same amount of time it gave Eisenhower.

Taft told the FCC in a letter yesterday that the Columbia, National and American Broadcasting System had turned down his request for a simultaneous half-hour of the three networks at the same time of day Eisenhower spoke. That was 6 to 6:30 p. m., EST.

NBC officials said in New York they were "still discussing" the matter. ABC and CBS officials could not be reached for comment.

modern tanks could be supplied to any overseas troops including those in combat in Korea, and that there would be almost an 80 percent shortage in requirements for newly developed tanks for army forces in the United States.

In mentioning the improved tank delivery rate during the last two months, a spokesman said:

"For example, Cadillac's production of the T48E1 improved version of the first model of the light tank and Detroit Arsenal's production of M47 medium tanks have been at, or above, scheduled levels. In addition, substantial quantities of M47s have been issued to troops."

In addition to the Detroit Arsenal, the M47 is being produced by the Schenectady, N. Y., plant of the American Locomotive company.

At Wilmington, Del., the first heavy tank for combat use is being produced by the Chrysler Corp., which also operates the Detroit Arsenal for the Army.

The Army has allowed few details of its heavy tank to be published, except to disclose that the T43 mounts a 120 millimeter gun compared with 90 millimeter for the new medium tanks. No official weight figure is given.

Russian tanks classed as "heavy" range in weight from 52 to 87 tons, with some experimental models reportedly exceeding that weight.

Carrying his estimate beyond that point, Collins asserted that such would mean that we spare on hand, a medium tank of about 40 tons needs 110,000 pounds. The Army declined to disclose the total amount of light, medium and heavy tanks for the current production program.

However, in recent testimony before a congressional committee, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army chief of staff, remarked that if Congress went through with a planned cut in the military budget for the next fiscal year starting July 1, the Army would have to "eliminate over 9,000 medium tanks" from its program.

Ike's Answer to FEPC Issue Pleases South

Washington, June 6 (AP) — Now that he's yielded his amateur standing, Dwight D. Eisenhower knows how it feels to be in politics where you get blamed if you do and blamed if you don't.

Eisenhower made his first political speech this week and the words were hardly out of his mouth before he began to be criticized for not being more specific. His supporters, of course, praised him.

Yesterday he tried to be more specific by answering directly some of the questions pitched at him by more than 250 reporters at his first political news conference.

He hardly finished when trouble began.

The retired general was asked where he stood on a compulsory FEPC Fair Employment Practices Commission—a subject important to Negroes but a bitter thought to southern white politicians.

Eisenhower said: "I believe we can do more by leadership and by getting the states to do so than by tinkering with a federal law or compulsory thing."

Almost at once Southern Democrats in Congress, long angry at the Trumanites for urging FEPC, began to praise the general. One of them even said he was sorry Eisenhower wasn't on the Democratic side.

But the answer didn't satisfy the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People which wants a federal FEPC law covering all states.

NAACP's Executive Secretary, Walter White, promptly wired Eisenhower:

"The failure of 37 of the states to take any affirmative action to assure equality of job opportunity points to the urgency of the need for federal action in this area."

"In view of this alarming failure, we urge you to reconsider today's statement in the light of your affirmation of 'unimpaired support of fairness among all American Citizens.'"

In view of the intense feeling of Negroes and southern whites about FEPC, Eisenhower's position, if displeasing to the Negroes, will cost him Negro votes in the cities, although capturing southern white votes.

In the South, where the overwhelming majority of voters are white, the electoral college vote this year may be of the utmost importance to the men running on the Democratic and Republican tickets.

Until now Eisenhower has been a glamorous figure to Americans who have admired him as a military leader but could hardly know much about his political and social views, because he never said much.

The fact that he has been able to roll up so much support, saying as little as he did in a political way, has been a miracle of modern American politics.

But if the general public, wondering what reaction it would have if he began laying his views on the line for everyone to see, "his closest advisers must have been pretty darned concerned about it."

This showed up at the Abilene news conference yesterday where a newsmen reported that some of the general's campaign leaders were frankly frightened before he opened his mouth but felt much better later.

But since this is only the start, Eisenhower will learn day by day the more you open your mouth, the more trouble you make for yourself. But if you're in politics, keeping it closed is no good either.

Malvern Plant Faces Unfair Labor Charge

Washington, June 6 (AP) — The Acme Brick Company of Malvern, Ark., today faced a trial examiner's recommendation to the National Labor Relations Board that it be found guilty of unfair labor practices.

Following a review of a 3-year-old strike by AFL brick workers against Acme, trial examiner J. J. Fitzpatrick recommended yesterday that the company be forced to pledge that it:

1. Would not threaten employees with loss of jobs for voting to strike;

2. Would not interfere with employees attempting to organize a labor union;

3. Would bargain collectively with the union; and

4. Would reinstate without prejudice, all employees who struck the firm May 5, 1950.

Three charges of unfair labor practices were filed against Acme by Local 683 AFL United Brick workers.

Capitol Grounds to Get Large Lake

Little Rock, June 6 (AP) — A one and a half acre artificial lake will be constructed on the Capitol grounds here. Construction is scheduled to start in about two weeks.

The project is sponsored jointly by the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission and the Secretary of State, C. G. Hall.

It will be located in back of the new Game and Fish Commission building, and will be stocked with native fish.

Commission Executive Secretary T. A. McGinnis said the commission hopes to use the lake for fishing demonstrations and contests.

The lake will be fed by natural springs and the overflow of water from an aquarium in the Commission building.

U.S. Proposes World Censor Survey

United Nations, N. Y., June 6 (AP) — The United States has told the United Nations it should quit trying to write a treaty on freedom of information and instead make an impartial, global survey of censorship in the world.

Walter Kotschig, deputy U. S. representative to the U. N. Economic and Social Council, said yesterday that the harder the U. N. tried to set up a treaty guaranteeing freedom of the press, the more restrictions appeared.

The U. N. has been trying to write such a treaty for years, but it has never been able to reconcile the views of countries such as the U. S. and Britain, where freedom of information is traditional with those of nations where the press is restricted.

Some U. S. publishers have expressed strong opposition to any treaty governing information because they feared American guarantees of freedom might be infringed to appease the views of other countries.

Kotschig, who spoke to the Social Committee of the Economic and Social Council and to a news conference, suggested that instead of working on a treaty the council should appoint an impartial official to report annually on freedom of information.

This official's report, he said, could be submitted for debate which would make clear the status of such freedom throughout the world.

Capt. Harry to Meet With 35th Division

Washington, June 6 (AP) — "Captain Harry" of Battery D Niles to Springfield, Mo., today to join the men with whom he served in France in World War I. It's the annual reunion of the 35th Division, and President Truman is rejoining his buddies of the 28th Field Artillery.

His appearance at Springfield will be highlighted by an address at 1 p. m. (EST) tomorrow in the Shrine Mosque before he flies back to Washington.

Following his arrival at Springfield at 4:15 p. m. (EST) Truman will go directly to the Colonial Hotel for greetings with close personal friends and a family dinner before attending a reception and ball.

Saturday will be a busy day for "Captain Harry" the second day of the annual reunion. There will be a Battery D breakfast at 7:30 a. m., a Division business meeting at 9 a. m., a memorial service for comrades who have passed on at 10:30, and then the big reunion parade at 1:30.

Truman, now 68, told reporters that he will march again this year as usual, stopping off at the reviewing stand to watch the units that follow him.

Ike's State GOP Visitors Secret

Little Rock, June 6 (AP) — A spokesman for the Arkansas delegation to greet Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in Abilene, Kas., will not disclose the name of other Arkansas present at a closed door session with the general.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Jeff Speck of Frenchman's Bayou, Ark., a leader in the Arkansas Eisenhower movement, said only that "other delegates to the GOP national convention were present."

He said the Arkansas delegation was "the first to meet with the general" Wednesday night.

Speck, who called Eisenhower "the most sincere man I've ever met," and "a man with no political obligations," was not alone in refusing to name the other Arkansas delegates in Kansas.

Sen. Frank Carlson (R-Iowa) said the "plan was not to name the delegates." He also said that several delegates from six states who went to Abilene as Taft supporters "are now for the general."

The name of only one other Arkansas, other than Speck, is known. It is Harry Craig of Caraway, Ark., a delegate to the Chicago convention from the 6th Arkansas Congressional District.

In ancient times the deaf often were regarded as idiots and killed.

and Clay Workers of America. The examiner ruled for the union on all three counts: Failing to bargain collectively; bargaining with individual employees instead of the union; and threatening to fire union members for union activities.

The union asked to force Acme to negotiate on original contract.

The BOOK of the CRIME

by ELIZABETH DALY

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

GAMADGE had turned from the secretary; he was glancing about the room, and beyond into the luxury of the blue bedroom with its glimpses of looking glass vistas and flowered carpet. He said: "The police might think that the locking-in showed jealousy."

"And Gray hasn't a jealous drop of blood!" Miss Austen smiled. "Now don't you see that we mustn't court publicity for either of them?"

"What's against the idea," said Gamadge, "is the abrupt manner of her going. She didn't even pack a little box."

"She didn't even take her handbag," Miss Austen told him, "or her gloves, but if she suddenly decided—"

"It doesn't sound like that sort of decision, exactly," Gamadge's eyes met Gray Austen's again. "What did happen up here, exactly? After you came in."

Gray jerked his head forward. "She was reading something out of those bookshelves."

"Was she?" He glanced along the shelves. "Nice collection."

"My tastes don't run that way, but often took out a book, I went and looked; it was one of those ghastly rehashes of old murder cases. I don't see the sense of getting all that kind of thing second-hand; having seen a good deal of first-hand killing myself, you know. So I said something."

Then she made me feel like a fool," she explained that she only had the thing out because she wanted to stuff up the crack between the dumb-water doors back there in our dressing-room; they'd been rattling. And I was going to apologize, and then she said she was going to leave me."

Hildreth drew a long sigh. "And she seemed so wrought up," continued Gray in so low a voice that it was barely audible, "that I did the fatal thing. Looked that door." He had moved forward from it, and now turned his head to look at it with a kind of resentment. "If I hadn't, she'd probably be here now."

Jerome was blowing smoke-rings. He said: "Well, Mr. Gamadge, there you have it. If you can give Gray any private advice, well and good; you needn't commit yourself in front of witnesses." He smiled. "I don't agree with my sister. It was a tantrum, and she might be anywhere."

"On the river," said Gray coldly. "Nonsense. Nonsense. Probably working it off—er—dishwashing. Independent working girl; proud little thing. I should say. If she'd gone off as you think, Hildreth, we'd have heard from her; if she's merely in a temper, we may never hear."

Gray said: "I have to know." "Well, make Mr. Gamadge tell you, then," Jerome came up to Gamadge and shook hands. "Good luck."

"Thank you," Jerome went briskly out of the room, and Hildreth came up to Gamadge in her turn. "I do hope we shall meet again in happier circumstances, Mr. Gamadge. And I hope you'll have something to drink before you go. Gray—you'll see to that, won't you?"

Gray nodded, and she withdrew smiling. Gamadge turned back to the bookshelves. Gray Austen joined him there.

"Very nice lot of stuff," said Gamadge. "That one, and that one—they're out of print. Booksellers have a standing order for some of these things; scouts always out for them. I'd give anything for those two I pointed out, if you ever care to sell."

"Don't think I have a right to." "That's so, life interest, your sister said. Well, at least you can read them. But you said you didn't care for criminology. I think you know, you're wrong there, Mr. Austen."

"I understand your personal reaction, but there's more to these murder cases and trials than mere slaughter and mayhem. Lots of human nature, and wonderful contemporary detail. Which collection was your wife reading when you came in here yesterday?"

"She wasn't reading it; I told you."

"Or said she wasn't," said Gamadge. "After all, you were scolding her; she might—"

"I believed her. Here it is," said Austen, pulling a thick paper-bound book out of a shelf; thickish, that is, in comparison with Rena's description. It was limp and dog-eared.

Gamadge accepted it from him. For them, it'd give something for "Murder Cases Retold. Very interesting. Opening it at random. Even in these days, in the middle nineteenth century, they sometimes had the sense to recognize that a doctored 'wretch was mad. Didn't execute him. These things are of interest to lawyers, you know."

"I don't think many people read them for the law in them."

"But this might be evidence for you, you know," said Gray Austen, smiling at him and flipping pages. "Evidence?" Gray Austen raised his eyebrows.

"We could determine by it whether she was only intending to stuff up a crack."

Austen stood looking at him. "It's rather thick for the purpose," suggested Gamadge, still smiling. "We might go back to where the dumb-water is, and see if it would fit in."

Austen, without moving his eyes from Gamadge's, said after a moment: "She might not have looked Gray."

"She'd have some idea."

"I don't care to check up on down in Russian territory after bombing the capital of Russia's mortal enemy.

Two days later, after the crew had patched up their ship, a Russian C-47, a gift from the United States, landed nearby. A Russian general, speaking through an interpreter, wearing mixed British and Russian military clothing, ordered the Americans to follow him. They took off and when they were up, the interpreter revealed himself aboard King's ship. King naturally figured that when he landed the man would rejoin the Russians. The man said he had an uncle in England and the Americans called him Jack Smith. King now learned that "Smith" was not a member of the general's party. The planes came down at Szczecyn but the Russian general and his party had disappeared by the time King had parked his bomber. King now decided that it would be less complicated to take "Smith" on to Poltava the next day and turn him over to the American staff there.

But the next day the Russians seized "Jack Smith" and General Aronov, chief of the Soviet general staff, wrote a violent complaint charging that "Smith" was a Polish terrorist and saboteur and charging King with stowing him away with intent to fly him to England. The trial record contains also a statement by Marshal Stalin charging that American aircraft were dropping wireless sets and other supplies for ulterior purposes in Soviet territory and were carrying on intrigues with the Polish underground.

General Harmon's opinion reversing the court-martial said there was no admissible evidence that King had any intention to fly "Smith" to England; or that "Smith" was a Pole, a terrorist or a saboteur, or that King had dropped anything in Russian territory or made any effort to communicate with the Polish underground.

General Harmon held that King had good reason to believe "Smith" was a member of the Russian general's staff; that King did know "Smith" was aboard one of their 5,000 feet up and that King was not even accused of trying to conceal "Smith's" identity from the Soviet authorities. General Harmon also held that it was no offense to let "Smith" crawl into an American flying while they were aloft because temperature was 53 degrees below zero. Nor was it wrong to permit King to associate with the American crew after they came down, because there was no attempt to conceal his identity.

All American planes in Szczecyn were immediately grounded at the charges were made against King. King was flown to Moscow for trial.

King said he was told that Russians shot "Smith". King was fined $800 and remanded. An attorney who presented his appeal said King's counsel trial was a medical officer.

General Harmon completely overrules King, revokes the fine and expunges the reprimand.

Clothing Industry Has Troubles Also

By SAM DAWSON

New York, June 5. (AP) — Another industry that has been having its trouble — the clothing industry — will test the next week or so its belief the worst is over.

Buyers are arriving here for the fall dress openings. Garment makers have been saying they expect the ordering for fall to be notably heavier this time. They hope they aren't just whistling in the dark.

The garment makers figure their industry may be in the same position as the shoe industry. Shoe makers showed their fall lines a few weeks back, picked up hatsful of orders and put their factories back into full or nearly full production again. Their long, private depression was over.

If the dress buyers follow the example of the shoe buyers, the garment district will be humming in the coming weeks. Early arrivals of buyers top the number of last year and some 10,000 are expected by next week.

Prices are lower this year since the dress makers have been getting lower-priced fabrics.

The hopeful garment makers base their optimism on much the same things as brought about the revival of shoe business: Lower prices to tempt consumers, high income levels, reduced inventories at the stores.

The entire textile industry has been having a rocket time for months. Apparel wool consumption dropped 25 per cent and cotton

FRANK LOVEJOY and RICHARD CARLSON read a letter found on the battlefield, in this scene from Warner Bros. "RETREAT, HELL!"

DOROTHY DIX

Teen-Agers Cherish Privacy

Dear Miss Dix: Is there something wrong with me because I'm not seriously interested in boys? I am 17, a junior in high school, and have never been attracted to the boys in my class. Most of my girl friends are boy crazy and they think I should be, too. It's not that I'm not interested at all, but after I date a boy two or three times, he bores me. Mother says I just haven't met the right boy, but I sometimes wonder!

Answer: Interest in the opposite sex comes to different people at different ages, and if you seem to be a little behind your girl friends, it's nothing to worry about. You will, one day, meet the boy who can make your heart palpitate. In the meantime, enjoy your emotional freedom. Romance has its joys but it also has its heartaches and sorrows, especially for the very young. With your girl friends for companions, studies to keep up and school activities to provide recreation, your life is full enough. Since you do date occasionally, your association with boys is sufficient to keep your social program balanced. Concentration on such matters of present importance as education will bring far more satisfactory results to your future life than would a steady round of dating, and falling in and out of love.

Keep Standards High

You probably have high ideals by which you choose your friends and just haven't yet met the boy to meet your standards. It's a fine idea to have good principles and to expect your friends to have them, too. Don't compromise on this point, either with girl or boy friends. You'll command much greater respect from your associates.

When Cupid's arrows begin striking around you, there'll be no mistaking their destination, or missing the one that makes a direct hit!

Weather to Stay Warm in This Area

By The Associated Press
 Another warm day was the outlook for most of the country in yesterday's mid-summer weather.
 It was hot and humid over wide areas of the country yesterday with temperatures in the 90s from Texas northward into North Dakota. They were above 100 in parts of Texas and the far Southwest.
 Today's lowest readings were in the Northeastern states.
 Showers and thunderstorms early today hit sections from the South Atlantic states westward to Oklahoma and Texas. Another wet belt extended over Montana and the Northwestern Plateau and Rocky Mountain areas.

ARKANSANS SPLIT
 Washington, June 6 (AP) — Arkansas' congressmen split, 4-2, yesterday on the House vote approving a compromise $4,447,730,750 foreign aid bill.
 Reps. Gathings, Harris, Hays and
 Trimble voted for the measure.
 Reps. Mills and Norrell opposed
 it. Rep. Tackett did not vote.

Did you ever allow the silver dollar to preach you a sermon? Beyond the glorious flag of our country is a spiritual homeland, to which we all belong. The red and the white and the blue are colors of living glory, reminding us of the history which has brought us where we stand today. They are the colors of life. They speak of courage and sacrifice and devotion. And just as clearly, the silver dollar calls us to live for something more than money. What a strange place to print a text for a sermon; on a silver dollar or on a coin. Our forefathers were aware of the dangers which would threaten their nation... so they sought to give us warning... In God We Trust.

One of our money is a nation, without which the silver or the paper would have presented little value. On every dollar bill we see the face of George Washington, a man who did everything he had, that America might come into being in the form of The United States. E pluribus unum must forever shame us out of selfishness and self-seeking.
 of many one" must forever emerge. Each of us must live for the rest, or the sacrifice of Valley Forge and the Delaware have gone for naught. Our money is forever saying to us, "look away from us; think of the nation; consider your fellow Americans; worship the living God. So shall the United States be a worthy member of the family of nations, of the family of God."
